

Why Your Business Needs Its Own Digital Address

Did you know Amazon once considered calling itself “Relentless.com”? Try typing it in- it still redirects to Amazon.

Jeff Bezos bought that domain in 1994. Why? Because even before the world knew Amazon, he knew the power of a domain name.

That’s how strong your online address can be- your domain is your brand’s first impression, forever.

What is a Domain Name?

Think of a domain name like your shop’s address. It’s the string you type in a browser to reach a website- like www.yourbrand.com.

Now imagine two stores:

- One has a bright signboard on Rajpur Road, clear branding, and a professional front.
- The other is tucked in a back alley with no name, just a piece of cardboard that says “open.”

Which one would you trust?

That’s the difference a domain name makes in the digital world.

Examples

Amazon → relentless.com: Jeff Bezos bought multiple domains to protect his brand before launching.

Google → googol.com They secured variations to ensure users reach them, no matter what they typed.

Facebook → thefacebook.com → facebook.com: Even billion-dollar brands evolve their domain strategy over time.

If these global giants take domain names seriously, why shouldn’t you?

5 Reasons Why a Domain Name is Non-Negotiable

1. Builds Credibility & Trust Instantly

People trust businesses with proper domain names. A custom domain like yourbrand.com says:

"We’re serious, we’re legit, and we’re here to stay."

2. Boosts Brand Recall

A simple, catchy domain sticks in people's minds. And when paired with good design and content, it becomes your brand's digital signature.

3. Improves Search Rankings (SEO)

Google ranks credible, custom-domain websites higher than free, generic ones. Ask any marketing agency—this is foundational SEO 101.

4. Professional Email IDs
